Of course, the plasterers, the carpet-sellers, the plumbers, the electricians, and all the other tradesmen in the town who had been working on the building, had left the site as soon as they heard the explosion. But the crash of the building had not stopped the workmen. The firemen were still pouring water on the fire, and the police were still searching the area for any survivors.

The explosion had caused a great deal of damage to the town. Many buildings were destroyed, and many people were injured. The police were working hard to find out what had caused the explosion and to prevent any further accidents.

The fire was still burning when the police arrived on the scene. They immediately began to extinguish the fire, and within a few minutes, the flames were under control. The police then began to search the area for any survivors. They found several people who had been trapped in the ruins of the building.

The police were working hard to rescue the people who were trapped in the building. They used sledges to remove the debris, and they worked for hours to find all the people who were still alive. Finally, they succeeded in rescuing all the people who were trapped in the building.
